

Slow speed after connecting to a 10 Gigabit switch

Overview

Upgrade Switch Hardware: If an outdated switch is impeding internet speed, consider upgrading to a higher-capacity switch with Gigabit or 10 Gigabit Ethernet ports to accommodate modern bandwidth requirements. Understanding the reasons behind this slowdown and how to troubleshoot it can save you from unnecessary stress and. Hey guys, I bought a Gigabit LS105G TP-Link switch for my home network, but after connecting my PC to it, my ISP Router says it's 100Mbit/s, even though the switch, and both cables used (ISP Router to Switch / Switch to PC) are 1000Mbit/s. I've checked the Ethernet connection on the PC, it says. An Ethernet switch is a network device designed to connect multiple devices within a Local Area Network (LAN). Now when I try to put in a switch (4 port gigabit switch), the speed i get on both PCs is 93-94mbps I have tried :- So comment on all the questions asked. Identifying why this happens is the first critical step toward a solution.
